Star Citizen: Where to Find DLC & Ships Since Star Citizen is a mix of FPS and RPG, the two communities seem to have a bit of a struggle to keep both bases happy. Due to the large volume of FPS missions, there's a separate branch of the Star Citizen section that is dedicated to FPS. Much of this is thanks to the large FPS ships that come with the starter package. The FPS section is a bit understaffed and some missions are missing. If you're looking for the coolest new ships, many of the most wanted are in the Star Citizen section. Each FPS ship has a history to it. Some are designed to be a serious FPS machine and others are more of a fun buy. I'm going to start off with the most popular ships because they're also the simplest to get. The ones that are above the line are some of the priciest as well. Aces For a low price, you can get into the cockpit of an Aces and see what Star Citizen's top ship can offer you. The Corsair is one of the most loved ships in the community and is a favorite of mine. The ship is huge and with 16 hardpoints, that makes it a perfect go-to ship for a pilot who wants a bit of everything. The pod gun comes with 3 capacity rounds and is one of the easiest ships to operate. It also comes with a medium sized console that can be used for whatever your heart desires. The Hornet is one of the biggest ships in the FPS community. While it's large, the ship is actually one of the smallest ships in the game as the Hornet is only a little larger than the Anaconda. It's a good ship to use if you're looking for a versatile ship that can do everything. The Hornet comes with 3 hardpoints and a secondary missile launcher that can dish out some serious damage. Gull-E The Gull-E is a little smaller than the Corsair. It's based off of the SR-2 which is one of the first ships developed by Chris Roberts. While the ship is somewhat old-school and not as pretty as the newer ships in the game, it's still a pretty fun ship to fly. It has 3 hardpoints and a hardpoint can be equipped with either a weapon or a structure. Phoenix 82157476af
